Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from An Essay Towards a Bibliography: Of the Published Writings and Addresses of Woodrow Wilson, March 1917 to March 1921 This essay is a continuation of the bibliographies compiled by Mr. demons and Mr. Brown.f It is an attempt to list the books, addresses, messages, notes and state papers written and since published, during the period of Mr. Wilson s second ad ministration, March 4, 1917 to March 4, 1921. It is hoped that all of the important items are included and that a sufficient number of citations are given to make them accessible to all readers. State papers, although they emanated from the State Department and often bore signature of the Secretary of State but whose composition may be attributed to Mr. Wilson, have been freely listed and have been included in their chronological order. Proclamations have been listed separately only when their interest seemed to warrant. All proclamations have been listed collectively under the year, as in the United States statutes at large. Executive orders have not been listed. These may be found in the Official Bulletin. The following are the chief sources from which citations are made: 1. Volumes of collected addresses, papers, etc., published by the regular publishing houses. 2. Government documents. 3. Official bulletin. 4. Congressional record. 5. Periodicals listed in Poole s Index. Citations from newspapers have not been generally made. The imprint Government Printing Office is to be understood wherever the place of publication is given as Washington. The Library of Congress has an analytical subject index on cards to the speeches and addresses of President Wilson practically complete from January 1, 1913, to June 30, 1920. My thanks...
